About IPRI-NOVA

The IPRI is an Institute dedicated to advanced studies in Political Science and International Relations. It defines itself as a structured and integrated project around three fundamental axis: scientific research; specialized training – doctoral and post-doctoral programmes; and knowledge transfer and social value creation. IPRI-NOVA cultivates excellence and wishes to be acknowledged by the quality of its theoretical research, the relevance of its empirical studies and its commitment to the western values and epistemologies. Its theoretical work is defined by standards internationally recognized by the state of the art of its disciplines, and IPRI-NOVA wants to stand amongst the best in its disciplinary areas – Political Science and International Relations. IPRI-NOVA promotes oriented research and applied knowledge, and has developed a relationship with the public policy-making and to the demands and challenges of contemporary society. This has been evinced by the support to decision-making, in public policies (Ministries) or in the entrepreneurial sector (enterprises), as well as, in its presence in the media (newspapers, radio, TV), reinforcing its position in the public sphere. Besides the above-mentioned areas, the Institute develops its own tools of knowledge dissemination: the website, its publications, and the publishing of the quarterly academic journal R:I.
